The Chosen One

They whisper your name where shadows crawl,
Neither saint nor sinner, but the end of all.

Your morality- smoke in the wind, Justice & Ruin, entwined, akin

In your endless life of 3700 years,
no kin beside you, no heart to claim.
Relations perish, yet grows your fame
You love with silence, you reign with scars,
A void of emotions, yet crowned in wars.

They say you are time's relentless blade,
Mercy denied, yet terror made.
Hope is a ghost where your shadow falls,
Even Gods recoil within their halls.

They call you Sworana, eternal, untamed,
The curse of empires, the unchained flame.
A prophecy whispered, near and far-
Aristo rises..... The end & the star.

--Milato